Valuable Park Avenue Synagogue Collections Being Transferred to The Jewish Theological Seminary

In a major historic arrangement completed in December, 1999 between Park Avenue Synagogue and The Jewish Theological Seminary, vast collections from our congregation's musical archives are being transferred to a fitting place in the Jewish Theological Seminary's world-renowned Library. This historic "long-term loan" was worked out through the joint efforts of Cantor David Lefkowitz, Chairman of the Board Geoffrey Colvin, counsel Howard Rubin and JTS's librarian, Dr. Meir Rabinowitz, with counsel Ann Appelbaum.

The enormous trove of documents, musical compositions, and valuable archival materials includes Cantor David Puttermann's music collection and correspondence, major parts of Cantor Lefkowitz's collection, the late Cantor Robert Segal's complete music library, and the inherited archives of our congregation's earliest history as Congregation Agudat Yescharim.

According to Dr. Mayer Rabinowitz, Seminary librarian, "The Park Avenue Synagogue Collection is a very important body of work. The entrusting of this Collection to the JTS Library makes the Library the major repository of the history and development of the American Cantorate, and will enable the Collection to be available to scholars and cantors of future generations."

Cantor Lefkowitz expressed "delight that treasures of Jewish musical heritage, unavailable elsewhere, may now be catalogued through the Seminary's state-of-the-art resources. Students, faculty, scholars, and library users of future generations will be able to benefit from these well-organized works of Jewish creativity."

Mr. Elliot Kahn, music archivist of the Library, has already organized and published catalogs of other important collections. Listings in these directories will be accessible to scholars worldwide through the Library's online facilities.

The Park Avenue Synagogue Collection, as it will be identified to the public, consists of five separate and distinct divisions:

Rabbinic Ruminations

We all know of the tremendous reverence and respect that Judaism has for learning and for education. Our scholarly and professional attainments have their roots in our tradition's emphasis on literacy and the acquisition of knowledge. We have pursued careers in business and finance, law, science and technology, and the arts. And many of us supplement our professional interests with classes and workshops in other fields that have captured our imagination.

To some extent, our studies separate us from our loved ones and each other, because when it comes to highly specialized areas or technical matters we cannot readily share this information with anyone who does not possess a background similar to ours.

We can, however, forge common family bonds and share in our heritage's love of learning with others through Bible study. Jews don't read the Bible, we study the Bible, preferably with a commentary. Group or family Bible study can link us to each other, to our past, and energize our present.

Book" not just because the Bible originated within Judaism, but because of our highly literate and knowledgeable community. It is both ironic and distressing that, while our present American Jewish community also has a reputation for literacy and achievement, so many "People of the Book" do not have a complete Jewish Bible in their homes (the Torah is only the first section of the Bible), cannot read it, and have so little knowledge of its contents.

It is for these reasons that the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism has begun a program of Bible study called Perek Yomi (a chapter-a-day), and produced a companion study guide. I encourage you to buy a Bible and to call the United Synagogue with any questions about their program (212-533-7800, extension 2245) or to access their webpage (<http://www.perekym.org>). Perek Yomi is free of charge.

A family Bible is not only a repository of the sacred texts of our people; it can also serve as a family archive, recording our Hebrew names, dates of birth and yahrzeiten. So often our clergy encounter B'nai Mitzvah who do not know their parents' Hebrew names*, brides and grooms who have forgotten their own names, and mourners, pressed for time before a funeral, who cannot provide a grandparent's Hebrew name, have no one to ask, and don't know where to look. (If your Bible does not designate space for this purpose, our family educator, Stacey Erlich, will happily supply you with the appropriate form).

By turning to our Bible for knowledge of our family's past and our people's legacy we will have made tremendous strides in restoring our reputation as "The People of the Book."

*One's proper Hebrew name consists of: your own name ben/bat (=son of/daughter of) plus your parents' Hebrew names and your father's tribe (if any).

PAS Collections

upon his retirement in 1976. The collection includes musical works composed between 1943 and 1975 by approximately 70 celebrated American composers commissioned by the synagogue. It also contains the scores and programs from 32 Friday Evening Services of Contemporary Liturgical Music.

- The "Hazzan David J. Puttermann Archive" which contains all the pertinent correspondence and documentary materials which Cantor Puttermann selected to be retained for their historic value and entrusted to Cantor Lefkowitz and the synagogue at the time of his retirement. The archive includes letters from world celebrated composers.

- The "Cantor David Lefkowitz Music Collection" which contains musical materials generated during his career thus far which are not available elsewhere. The collection reflects Cantor Lefkowitz's scholarly research and creative output, and includes 50 volumes of musical scores with corresponding printed programs from the Annual Classical and Contemporary Liturgical Music Services and other concerts produced by him at Park Avenue Synagogue since 1976. These volumes and other music of the collection include a vast number of musical works by various composers, commissioned and/or premiered by the cantor and the synagogue. The collection also includes several hundred of Cantor Lefkowitz's original compositions, arrangements, adaptations and compilations for prayers of all services and special occasions throughout the Jewish year.

- The "Cantor Robert H. Segal Music Collection" (Robert Segal was the cantor of B'nai Jeshurun from 1952 to 1977) contains the complete library of Segal's choral, cantorial and concert repertoire as well as music from nearly a century of his congregation's liturgical heritage. He donated his library to the Park Avenue Synagogue between 1978 and 1981, and it was catalogued under Cantor Lefkowitz's auspices. (Moreover, it was Cantor Segal's collection of some of composer David Nowakowsky's masterful compositions that inspired Cantor Lefkowitz to pursue his extensive research and discovery of all of Nowakowsky's original manuscripts.)

- The "Congregation Agudat Yesharim Archives" contain historical documents and records of the original congregation (founded in 1882) that was amalgamated to form the Park Avenue Synagogue. Archives of this type are maintained by the Ratner Center for Conservative Judaism, a department of the Seminary which is charged with conserving and maintaining archival records of Conservative congregations and making them available for scholarly use.

We look forward to the Seminary Library's Park Avenue Synagogue Collection, which represents our congregation's significant role in and contributions to American Jewish life, becoming an important source for further research and inspiration for many future generations of American Jews!

Mishloah Manot - What???

Did you know that Purim is actually the Jewish gift giving holiday? We are supposed to give a gift of two types of food, requiring two types of blessings beforehand, to at least two different people. This most often is accomplished by sending food baskets called Mishloah Manot.

This year, we are offering you the opportunity to order your Mishloah Manot through Park Avenue Synagogue. The cost is $50 per basket. To order an attractive basket filled with hamentashen, chocolates and other goodies or for more information, please call Stacey Erlich, family education director, at 369-2600, ext. 136. Orders must be placed by Friday, March 10.
